

When I turn on the local evening news, I want to see stories that tell me about my community. I want to see informative stories that give me better insight into my schools and my local politics. I want to see journalists with integrity ask the tough questions.

Instead, I hear about weather related disasters in other states, and stories about national celebrities. How can I keep up with events in my community when my TV and radio stations haven't ever brought a news crew to my town?

Local television stations these days are owned by huge national corporations who use our public airwaves to make money, not to tell me what I need to know.
